

The Panthers, Falcons, Saints and Buccaneers prove they can troll with the best on Twitter

By Marissa Payne

June 17, 2015 at 1:19 p.m. EDT

Grumpy Cat, however, was not impressed. (Steve Jennings/Getty Images for Civic Entertainment Group)

Gift Article Share

The social media teams behind the Carolina Panthers, Atlanta Falcons, New Orleans Saints and the Tampa Bay Buccaneers showed the rest of the world how to use the Internet on Wednesday when they trolled each other on Twitter using nothing but memes and GIFs.

The Inaugural NFC South Twitter GIF Throwdown (let's hope this becomes an annual thing) began when the Twitter account of Raymond James Stadium, where the Bucs play, tweeted about its favorite color.

10:26 AM · Jun 17, 2015

52 Reply Copy link

Read more on Twitter

The Bucs then responded to the reference from 2004's "Mean Girls" with yet another "Mean Girls" quote.

 Tampa Bay Buccaneers
@Buccaneers · Follow

That's so fetch. @RJStadium

 RaymondJames Stadium · @RJStadium

On Wednesdays we wear red. #Obviously @tbuccaneers

10:32 AM · Jun 17, 2015

197 Reply Copy link

Read 11 replies

That sparked the start of what would become an hour long back and forth, first just between the Bucs and the Falcons, but later between all four teams.